

WARM BROWNIE

The Door to brown tones

Guide

THANK YOU

A quick message from us to you.

BASIC RULES

Not every photo is similar! Often, you have different light and different colors. That's why you should apply some basic rules to get the perfect tones every time. Don't worry, it's very simple and just a few steps.

PERFECT SKIN

Here we will explain how to always get the perfect skin tones using warm brownie.

THANK YOU

from Maja & Alex

for the pros

If you are just searching for a good preset that is easy to use and produces decent skin tones, skip this paragraph. If you are very serious about always having the best skin tones possible, keep reading. For perfect skin every time, you can go the extra mile and apply two more steps. If the skin is too bright and you already pulled the highlights down but still want to darken the skin, head over to the luminance section and move the Orange luminance to brighten or darken the skin. If the skin is getting too orange during this process, go to the orange saturation slider and desaturate the oranges a little bit.

darken skin!*

always follow these to ensure consistency

Because every photo is different, you need to make small adjustments here and there after applying warm brownie. First, brighten or darken the image using the exposure slider. If the skin is still too white, pull down the highlight slider. If the shadows appear too dark, pull up the shadows. Last but not least, head over to the temperature slider and tweak it to your liking. We recommend always warming up the images for those brown tones.
